

Multi-level Governance in Ukraine's Governance Ecosystem: how to achieve unity in a multifaceted world

Tertychka Valeriy

National University Kyiv-Mohyla Academy, Kyiv-Mohyla School of Governance, Kyiv, Ukraine

Abstract: This paper explores the dynamics of multi-level governance in Ukraine's evolving governance ecosystem, focusing on strategies to foster unity across diverse institutional, regional, and political layers. In the wake of significant political, social, and economic transformations, Ukraine faces unique challenges in aligning national and subnational governance structures.

These structures operate within a multifaceted context marked by decentralized reforms, international influences, and the need for cohesive policy implementation. Through an analysis of institutional frameworks, case studies, and stakeholder perspectives, this paper examines the tensions and synergies among governmental and non-governmental actors at various levels. Key findings suggest that fostering unity in Ukraine's governance ecosystem requires innovative governance models that balance local autonomy with national coherence.

The study contributes insights into how Ukraine can achieve a resilient governance model that adapts to both internal diversity and external pressures, ultimately supporting a more unified and stable governance landscape.