Abstract: Good leadership is a key factor for good effective organizations. Does our working world, in the face of digital transformation, require a new understanding of leadership? Flexible work arrangements, mobile workplaces, and networked structures create challenges that redefine the interaction between leadership and employees.
Modern leadership includes the interest of an organization combined with the needs of the employees. The interest of employees are changeing with age. How to lead experienced employees and how are leadership demands for young employees. How does continuous development lead for change and sustainable work results? The results of Brain science gives answers to these questions and leads to the demand for new good leadership!
AI is not only technically, but also from a human and organizational perspective an interesting tool for successsful implementation. Leaders are faced with the task of guiding change processes, involving employees, and ensuring healthy structures in digital transformation.
